A New York special to the Philadelphia Press says: The Press last week published the story of the flip at to Liverpool of James McDermott, of Brooklyn, a suspected traftor to the Irish cause and informer. McDermott was arrested when he arrived on the other side. Before his sudden departure from New York an attempt to murder him was made by a man tempt to murder him was made by a man named Gaynor, a representative of the or-ganization that the spy had betrayed. Me-Dermott was not dangerously wounded. The would-be assassin was arrested, but McDermott dared not remain in the country to prosecute his assailant, and he fled to England.

There he was arrested, not because There he was arrested, not because the British Government intends to punish him, but for the purpose of giving him a harbor of refuge. The Brooklyn Eagle tonight prints a long story of McDermott's perfidy, written by John A. Hennessy, of Brooklyn, accompanied by corroborative letters furnished by James O'Malley and Long, two members of the dynamite party. The story, if true, not only proves McDermott to be a second Carey, but it also shows the extent of the Irish dynamite organization in the United States.

DECEIVING O'DONOVAN BOSSA. According to the Eagle, last December McDermott learned through a leaky mem-ber of the Clan-na-Gael that Dr. Gallagher McDermott learned through a leaky member of the Clan-na-Gael that Dr. Gallagher and his brother Barnard were about to go to Ireland or England for the purpose of blowing up public buildings. McDermott visited the office of O'Donovan Rossa some days afterward and professed great arder for Ireland's welfare. He intimated that he would like to be sent out with a dynamite party, and offered to defray part of the expenses of the trip. He subsequently called on Rossa and told him he was going to Europe to look for Stuart, the defaulting cashier of the Brooklyn Board of Education. He requested from Rossa credentials to act as correspondent of the United Irishman, and showed a letter from the Brooklyn Union, signed by Lorin Palmer, authorizing James McDermott to represent the paper. The letter from Rossa was secured and McDermott sailed.

Predon it was decided by him and Featherstone that a box of nitro-glycerine should be brought on to Liverpool by Deasy. Only McDermott and Featherstone were then cognizant of this. Deasy was to sail on the 19th. On the arrival of the steamer at Liverpool it was boarded by the police and searched. Deasy was to an one board, however, having missed the boat, McDermott poeted back in hot haste to Cork and insisted on Deasy being at once sent. Having complete hold of Featherstone, he induced the latter to send Deasy on the 27th with the nitro-glycerine. Deasy was warned not to take any documents with him, not even a note to Flannigan, to whom the dynamite was consigned. Before he left, however, McDermott intercepted him, and gave him anote to Flannigan, to whom the dynamite was consigned. Before he left, however, McDermott intercepted him, and gave him anote to Flannigan, stating: "This is Mr. Deasy, a good man, and the person whorings you the nitro-glycerine." On Saturday morning last the child, while at breakfast, was suddenly taken with spasms while endeavoring to drink coffee, and though the best of medical skill was brought to bear upon the case, she continued to suffer until Sunday morning, when death came to her relief. The bite was over the right eye and was a very triding one.

This is what Captain Hodgden said when speaking of an unpleasant experience he had on board ship near Washington. He added: "The bad effects of which I soon felt." Then he went on to say that he had severe pain, followed by a terrible attack of dysentery. A dispatch from Hutchinson, Kan., says A man named Emerson, but generally known as Texas Bill, shot and killed a baker named Denger about noon Sunday. Emerson was arrested. About midnight Sunday night sixty masked men went to the jail, hammered down the doors, and were just about taking the murderer out to hang him when the sheriff, with a large posse, arrived and drove them off. Emerson is known as a desperado, and is said to have killed several men. His act of yesterday is characterized as cold-blooded and unprovoked.
